

The AMIGO
Edit

Welcome to issue 41 of the AmiGo Edit, a short and sweet report from the AmiGo editors that highlights the places, people, and things we're loving right now. Expect ultra-curated picks, twice a month!

2

Shoulder season is our favorite time to travel—less crowds, way better rates, and typically still perfect weather—and there are some cool new hotels that are giving us even more reason to plan one last beachy trip. Kicking things off is Sunset in Patmos, a laid-back boutique stay from the owners of Athens' beloved wine bar Wine is Fine. It's a minimalist, 70s-inspired hotel with great food (of course). Next we have Les Bassans in Brittany from French hotel group Fontenille. The cozy stay delivers water views from every room and a quiet location on the French coast, making it ideal for a restorative weekend trip. And if you love the South of France but you don't love how busy it gets during peak season, an early fall trip to the recently reopened and redesigned Le Provençal will allow you to experience a blissfully quiet part of the coast at a stylish hotel with a striking seaside pool.